The Republic of Costa Rica is a small country with less than 350 000 inhabitants, and it has been under the surfers' radar since the 1960s. It can get crowded and is profoundly influenced by sudden tide changes. Free Wi-Fi is a given. Prepare your arms for long paddling sessions. Our hotel and experiences are designed for the entire family. You can get barreled, but its closeout can also cause injuries and damages to surfboards. The fast right-hand barreling wave gets hollow and powerful at the blink of an eye, and the use of helmets is always a wise pick. Here, waves can reach 13 feet, and there's always plenty of barrels and punchy lips. However, with its seven-kilometer stretch of beach, it will always entertain any surfer. This three-section wave is often crowded, especially when the swell hits the six-to-eight-foot range. Despite the water pollution, this dreamy point break gets irresistible in classic conditions. Let's take a look at the best surf breaks the country has to offer. The place offers multiple peaks, andÁ Áit is not too crowded.
